Low-Fidelity Prototype

Here I wanted to display the items in the bag in a way that allowed for the users to be able to see what they purchased as well as some description about it, as well as the quantity and the cost. I wanted this page to very intuitive to scroll through so the customers know exactly what they're purchasing.

High-Fidelity Prototype

In this prototype, I pretty much followed my prototype from the previous step. Here, I also made the quantity of the item changeable, in case the customer actually wanted to purchase more of the same pillow. In addition, I designed this page to be as simplistic and minimal as possible, reflected in the font and color scheme. This gives off a more elegant vibe, very fitting of a pillow company.